

Water a basic right

ON July 28, the UN General Assembly overwhelmingly agreed to a resolution declaring the human right to safe and clean drinking water.

At total of 122 countries voted in favour of the resolution but a few, including Australia, abstained.

It's hard to find a more basic need than that, so what is it that the Australian Government considers more important than safe and clean drinking water?

DARIAN HILES, Adelaide.

The Advertiser www.adelaidenow.com.au

Friday, August 6, 2010 21 ●